Changes in eating habits in Italy

The aims of this report are to:

– describe the traditional food in Italy
– analyse which factors have influenced the Italian eating habits.

TRADITIONAL FOOD IN ITALY

Although it is known that Italian people take proud of their traditional food, it is a matter of fact that their habits are remarkably changing.

Typical Italian food is home made and requires a considerable amount of time to be cooked. Preservatives and colourants are not used whereas byological ingredients are fully taken into consideration. In order to have a good result it is necessary to use all the ingredients that grow in Italy which have a particular and strong test.

FACTORS THAT HAVE INFLUENCED ITALIAN HABITS TOWARDS FOOD

Even if the 80% of people still prefer their tradition food, it has emerged that several factors have led people to obtain for a totally different option. The advertisements on television, thrown by big companies, get the message that ‘food is fun’ across to the people. Those and more often adverts referring to food allude to a happy message. Another factor is that nowadays only few people have actually time to cook due to their job responsibilities. Moreover grandparents do not teach any more their traditional recipes as the family lost its worth.

It has been also reviled that fast food has more costumers than before, also because this kind of food is available almost everywhere. Although Italian habits have changed towards the food they eat, I don’t totally agree with the fact that tradition food is going to disappeared.

ERIC ARTHUR BLAIR (George Orwell) was born in 1903 in India, where his father worked for the Civil Service. The family moved to England in 1907, and in 1917 Orwell entered Eton, where he contributed regularly to the various college magazines. From 1922 to 1927 he served with the Indian Imperial Police in Burma, an experience that inspired his first novel, Burmese Days (1934). Several years of poverty followed. He lived in Paris for two years before returning to England, where he worked successively as a private tutor, schoolteacher and bookshop assistant, and contributed reviews and articles to a number of periodicals. Down and out in Paris and London was published in 1933. In 1936 he was commissioned by Victor Gollancz to visit areas of mass unemployment in Lancashire and Yorkshire, and The Road to Wigan Pier (1937) is a powerful description of the poverty he saw there. At the end of 1936, Orwell went to Spain to fight for the Republicans and was wounded. Homage to Catalonia is his account of the civil war. He was admitted to a sanatorium in 1938 and from then on was never fully fit. He spent six months in Morocco and there wrote Coming Up for Air. During the Second World War he served in the Home Guard and worked for the BBC Eastern Service from 1941 to 1943. As literary editor of the Tribune he contributed a regular page of political and literary commentary, and he also wrote for the Observer and later for the Manchester Evening News. His unique political allegory, Animal Farm, was published in 1945, and it was this novel, together with Nineteen Eighty-Four (1949), which brought him world-wide fame.

George Orwell died in London in January 1950. A few days before, Desmond MacCarthy had sent him a message of greeting in which he wrote, ‘You have made an indelible mark on English literature...you are among the few memorable writers of your generation.’
