

Language for Teaching Example schedule – Regular workshops

This 8-month schedule includes regular face-to-face workshops after completion of each Unit of online self-study. This is the recommended course format where it is possible. If this is difficult to arrange, e.g. because candidates need to travel long distances for face-to-face training, see the 'blocked workshops' schedule below for an alternative format. Other formats are possible within the criteria below.

When you plan your schedule, you must take into account:

- school holidays / school term dates
- busy times for teachers such as exam periods.

We will ask you for your course schedule when you submit your course register before the start of the course. We recommend that schedules are no shorter than 5 months.

Language for Teaching Example schedule – Blocked workshops

This 9-month schedule includes face-to-face workshops delivered in 2-day blocks every 3 months after completion of each Module of online self-study. This is the recommended course format where regular two-weekly face-to-face sessions are difficult to arrange, e.g. because candidates need to travel long distances for face-to-face training. See the 'regular workshops' schedule above for an alternative format. Other formats are possible within the criteria below.

When you plan your schedule, you must take into account:

- school holidays / school term dates
- busy times for teachers such as exam periods.

We will ask you for your course schedule when you submit your course register before the start of the course. We recommend that schedules are no shorter than 5 months.

Language for Teaching Example schedule - Online only

This 8-month schedule is for an online only course, when face-to-face sessions are difficult to arrange. This is not the recommended course format, as:

- candidates will not benefit from practice of and feedback on their productive skills speaking and writing
- candidates may struggle to stay on track with a long course of online only study.

These factors can be addressed to some extent by including remote, online support.

See other schedules for examples of how you can include face-to-face training in various formats. Other formats are possible within the criteria below.
