From teaching courses and qualifications to training, we support them at every step.

Getting the most from every moment of learning

Every single moment spent with a language learner is important. That's why we integrate learning and assessment, to help teachers measure, guide and support progress.

Learning takes place at different rates for different individuals. This can make it difficult for teachers to know how learning is progressing and where to focus. An approach is needed, therefore, that focuses not only on teaching and learning, but also on assessment. Assessment in this case doesn't simply mean tests, but any activity that provides information about student or whole class learning.

By assessing where learners are, a teacher can provide evidence of progress and actionable feedback to motivate learners and show them what they need to do next to achieve their goals.

The integral role of assessment in language teaching and learning

Assessment is integral to language learning and carries a range of different purposes. Exams and tests enable learners to prove their skills to the world, but assessment also helps shape programmes of learning and guide the decisions that need to be made to help learners improve.

Using assessment to inform teaching has a significant impact on the effectiveness of learning, and on student motivation.

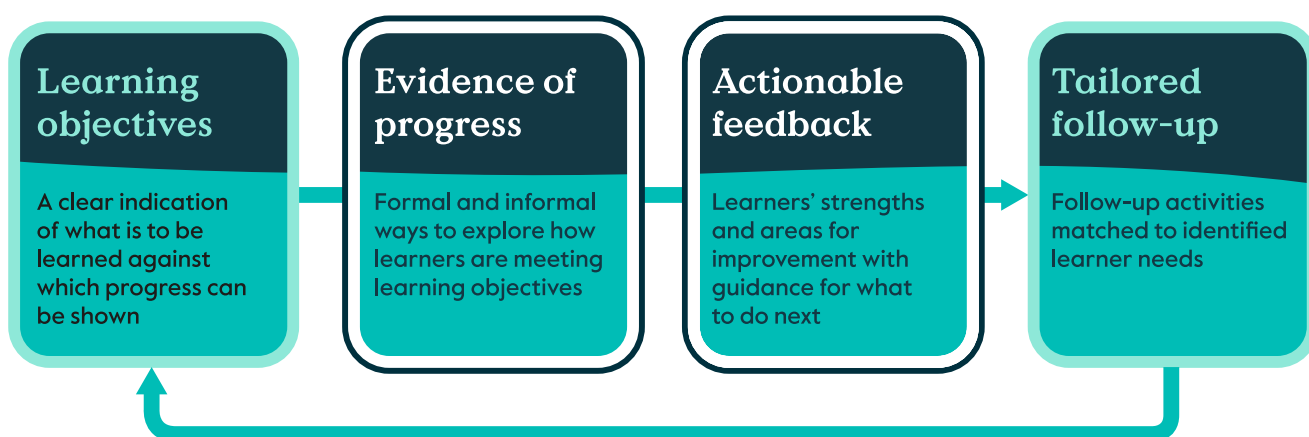

Assessment should not be seen as separate to learning, therefore, or as something that just takes place at the end of a course of learning. Ongoing assessment throughout the learning journey helps teachers to identify individual and collective learning gaps, enabling them to plan lessons that are more targeted and responsive to student needs.

Integrating learning and assessment to improve outcomes

Integrated learning and assessment (ILA) is the combination of teaching, learning and assessment methods to plan, measure and improve outcomes. Backed by our research, we believe that providing evidence of progress and actionable feedback is the best way to help learners succeed.

These are two of the four ‘pillars’ that underpin learner success and are at the heart of successfully integrating learning and assessment in the classroom. They are supported by having clear learning objectives and tailored follow-up activities planned by teachers.

Action is also required at an institutional level. Learning potential is not fully realised if curriculum, learning objectives, teaching materials, classroom practices and assessment tools are not aligned to the same end goals. You can find out more about how ILA works by reviewing our paper ‘Getting the most out of every moment of learning: The power of integrating learning and assessment’.

You’ll find this and a related guide to help teachers implement ILA approaches at Integrating learning and assessment means better results, better learning and better teaching.”

A learning journey like no other

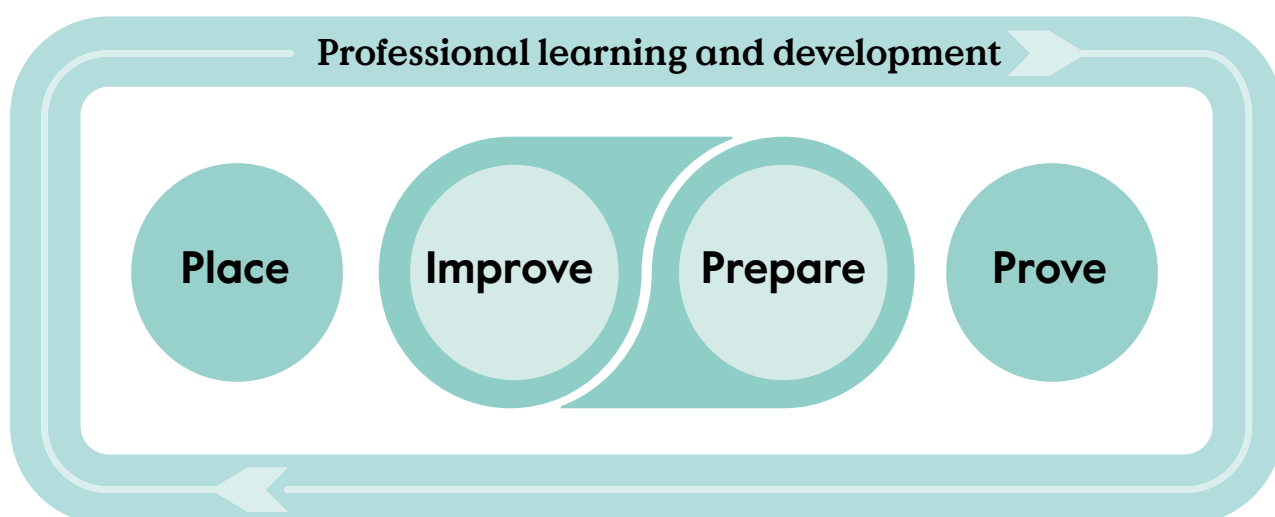

Our unique approach to learning and assessment is underpinned by our comprehensive professional development portfolio, to deliver real results for your organisation.

At Cambridge, we believe that getting the most from every moment of learning means providing clear evidence of progress and actionable feedback — the best way to help learners succeed.

Our courses, resources, exams and tests map to the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR) – an international standard for describing language ability. It uses a six-point scale, from A1 for beginners, up to C2 for those who have mastered a language.

At Cambridge we have everything you need to help your organisation provide a comprehensive and successful English language programme.

Place your students or employees on the right course

The Cambridge English Skills Test is a flexible and reliable way to group learners by their English level. This means that you can place them in the right class, training course or learning programme, or enter them for the right exams and tests. This will ensure that your students or employees get the most from their studies.

The test is online, on-demand and tests all four language skills (Speaking, Writing, Reading and Listening) in modules. There is a General English and Business English version available.
