Why take an adaptive test?

- Your adaptive test is personalised. Some questions might be easy, and some will be more difficult. Your questions are chosen based on your previous answers.
- An adaptive test will give you an accurate result and a better test experience because it is tailored to your level.
- Your Reading test usually takes approximately 20–45 minutes, depending on your level. However, it could be shorter or longer than this.
- Your results will be available immediately after you complete the test.

What do I need to know about my test?

- Look at the sample test to become familiar with the tasks. The sample test is not adaptive. It shows you all the different types of tasks in the Cambridge English Skills Test: General. When you take your real test, you will see some of these tasks, but not all of them. The tasks you see will depend on your level.
- Before answering a question, read the task instructions and any information about the texts, as well as the text including the title. This will help your understanding.
- You can change your answer to any question on the same screen.
- Check all your answers carefully before you click on the arrow to move to the next screen. However, do not take too long to read through everything again, try to keep moving at a good, steady pace.
- When you click forward to the next screen, you will not be able to go back.

Task type 5	(Reading) Five-Question Multiple Choice  For this question, choose the correct answer.    Lucy Brooks - piano player I've played the piano and violin since I was 3. Now I'm studying at music college, and some months ago I took part in a national piano competition. My teachers had kept suggesting I should enter, but I wasn't sure – I was worried I'd be too nervous. However, I was able to play plenty of complicated piano pieces, so I felt I'd probably be as good as some of the other competitors, and decided to give it a try. But no-one was more surprised than me when I eventually reached the final! To be honest, I can't remember that day very clearly because I hadn't slept well the night before. I'd set my alarm so that I wouldn't arrive at the concert hall late. My sisters planned to listen to it on the radio at home, but my parents were there in the hall. Suddenly it was my turn! As usual, the moment I went on stage and began playing, all I thought about was the music, not who was watching. In fact, I hardly even noticed the full orchestra performing with me. Then the results were announced – and I'd won! We were presented with our prizes, and I had to make a speech. I hadn't prepared anything, but I managed to say quite a lot, luckily. However, the real high point came when the conductor brought a woman over to say hello. I didn't recognise her initially, but when he said her name, I realized I'd seen her on TV playing in concerts all over the world. Anyway, it all felt like a huge achievement, and my teacher said I'd done brilliantly. Life wasn't quite the same after the competition was over, though. Plenty of students at my college had won big competitions, so I wasn't considered particularly special there. But the competition made me think about where I was going next, and that if I was going to carry on playing the piano and being successful, as I hoped, then there would be plenty more studying ahead. Anyway, I'm hoping something good will come from my win. For example, it's difficult for young people to get music lessons where I live, and I've met talented teenagers who can play any type of music from classical to jazz, but can't get proper training. So, it'd be great if publicity from the competition could help to change that. I've also written piano music especially for teenagers who are learning - that might encourage them to practise more!   13 Why wasn't Lucy keen to enter the piano competition initially? <input type="radio"/> She didn't feel confident about her chances of winning. <input type="radio"/> She hadn't done enough preparation for it. <input type="radio"/> She thought it might be a stressful experience. <input type="radio"/> She wanted to avoid disappointing her teachers. <hr/> 14 How did Lucy feel during her performance in the final? <hr/> 15 After the results of the competition were announced, Lucy <hr/> 16 What does Lucy say about her life after the competition? <hr/> 17 Lucy now hopes that her success will

Task type 6	(Reading) Two-Question Multiple Choice  For this question, choose the correct answer.  Memory techniques Different cultures remember information in different ways. In Australia, for example, First Nations people have used 'songlines' – songs and stories for recording events, facts and locations – for over 40,000 years. Through their songlines, locations of rocks that make the best tools, waterholes, or details of plants are recorded. Each event or fact is associated with a song, story, dance or ceremony. A songline also functions as a map for a journey – the songlines of the Yanyuwa people from Australia's far north relate to distances of over 800 kilometres. Some cultures also include the position of stars in their songs to pass on knowledge of seasons and navigation skills. Often, only important elder members have complete knowledge of their people's songlines. By limiting who is allowed to learn everything, misunderstandings or misinterpretations are prevented, and accuracy maintained. It is the structure of the human brain that means memory methods such as songlines have been able to work so effectively across human societies. But dependence on writing in modern societies has contributed to people losing the ability to construct memories using processes like those employed in songlines. As the ancient techniques can be more effective than some newer techniques, perhaps they should be used alongside current educational methods. For example, schoolchildren could be taught to sing their science, or could learn mathematics through poems. In this way, memory techniques from ancient cultures can be adapted to contemporary life.  18 What does the writer explain in the first paragraph? <input type="radio"/> how a culture developed its use of songlines <input type="radio"/> why one very extensive songline was created <input type="radio"/> why access to some songlines might be restricted <input type="radio"/> which actions help recall particular events in songlines  <hr/> 19 What opinion does the writer express in the second paragraph?

Task type 8	(Reading) Missing Paragraph Text Completion Read the text. Choose the correct paragraph A–F for each gap. You do not need to use one of the paragraphs.  Building meaningful relationships Psychologists have concluded that close relationships depend on a sense of 'shared reality', a feeling that we experience the world in the same way as someone else. This has been demonstrated by an experiment in which participants were put in pairs to discuss a series of ambiguous film clips. They then rated their agreement with statements such as 'we saw the world the same way' and 'we anticipated our partner's comment'. It was shown that the more these scores reflected a shared reality, the more they wanted to continue the discussion. 1. <input type="text"/> Unfortunately, though, a flawed understanding of certain aspects of our interactions can lead us to act in ways that prevent any of these forms of relationship from developing. We often make an erroneous assumption about how our body language will be interpreted by those we are conversing with. 2. <input type="text"/> This is because it's easy to fake body language while your mind is elsewhere, with the result that others don't necessarily trust it. Consequently, it is better to demonstrate your attention explicitly. Try paraphrasing what someone has just expressed – that's impossible to do if you haven't been listening. If you agree with them, be sure to express that verbally. 3. <input type="text"/> Nevertheless most people are reluctant to do this, as was found in a study that encouraged 'self-disclosure'. Pairs were given various discussion prompts designed to promote deeper connections, such as 'what in your life do you feel most grateful for?' and 'if a crystal ball could tell you about your future, what would you want to know?'   A Also, conversations should tackle the kind of subject matter that allows a shared reality to develop. We often stick to superficial topics, skirting over more important issues. Yet research shows that when we share more personal thoughts, this can put us on an accelerated path to stronger relationships. B On the other hand, the mere awareness of these barriers to creating a sense of shared reality can put you on the path to correcting them. Research shows, however, that you need to make a conscious effort to change your behaviour. C Multiple studies have replicated this finding. Whether we are forming connections with friends, romantic partners or passing acquaintances, the sense of shared reality predicts how close we will feel to someone. D People similarly tend to hold back when it comes to telling others how much they appreciate them, feeling that compliments will sound ingratiating. This tendency prevents our acquaintances from knowing how much we value their better qualities, which again undermines shared reality. E Unfortunately, people worried the conversation would be awkward compared with standard safe small talk. They also believed their partner would have little interest in hearing their innermost feelings. In reality, the encounters weren't as uncomfortable as feared. Those involved found themselves caring more about the conversation and feeling closer to the other person than expected. F One common tendency, for example, is to nod or smile to show we've heard the speaker and agree with them. We imagine these communicative signals will be taken at face value but that may not happen.
